Female-fronted symphonic metal band Eden on Fire from Erie, PA recently debuted their new single “Fallen”. The songs starts off with a beautiful piano arrangement before the ethereal vocals kick in. Then slow heavy guitars kick in which brings the tempo a notch. The theme and lyrics of the song speak of those moments where we fall into moods we simply cannot seem a find a way out of. Whether it is depression, sadness, or just disappointment, we fall into those pits of despair and struggle to find a way out of them. No matter how far we fall however, there is always a way out. I enjoyed the heck out of this one, and if you enjoy symphonic metal, then you will enjoy this one as well.”

“Amy Gould, lead singer and keyboardist of Eden On Fire, From Erie, Pa., has similar sentiments. “When we think of bullying, though, we picture the cartoonish burly kid with rosy cheeks pounding his fist into his hand. But in reality, bullies come in all shapes, sizes, genders and ages. And unfortunately for those of us in the public eye, it’s not uncommon to keep experiencing bullies well into our adulthood. So bullying for me is not just something I loathe watching young people experience. It’s something, as performers, I and others continue to experience,” Gould noted.”
